The Big Health Review 2012

Reach were asked by the Learning Disability Partnership Boards in Stoke and Staffordshire to arrange the 2012 Big Health Review.

We asked people with learning disabilities and carers to talk about their healthcare experiences.

The Big Health Review took place on 3rd July at the Tillington Hall Hotel in Stafford.

Lots of people from Stoke and Staffordshire came along to take part sharing their stories, thoughts and ideas on healthcare services.

Some people thought their health services were very good and were happy with them.

Other people talked about things that had gone wrong for them.

The day went very well with over 60 people from Stoke-on-Trent and Staffordshire attending.

Reach gathered lots of information from everyone who took part.

As part of the review, Reach will be asking MPs and Experts for their thoughts and ideas at the Parliament meeting on Monday July 23rd.

Reach will use the information collected from the Big Health review and the Parliament meeting to write a report for Stoke-on-Trent and Staffordshire councils.

This will mean that Reach have worked with over 80 people with learning disabilities and carers for the health review.

Reach would like to thank everyone for sharing their thoughts and experiences.
